Empire of western Asia, known since 1935 as Iran, which has issued stamps since 1868.

Under the rule of Cyrus and Darius (522–486 BC), the Empire of the Medes and Persians formed one of the most important civilisations of the ancient world. The Persian Empire was conquered in the fourth century BC by Alexander the Great whose dominions extended eventually as far as the north-west frontier of India.

The Hellenistic kingdoms into which Persia was divided survived the onslaught of the Romans but were eventually overrun by Barbarian incursions from central Asia. Successive native dynasties

Nasr-ed-Din, as Shah, set in motion many far-reaching reforms which effectively westernised the country. Among these reforms was a regular postal system, established in 1868.

Nasr-ed-Din was first portrayed on Persian stamp on a series introduced in 1876.

Registeration Labels used for Postage.

Postmasters in Persia had to account for Registeration Labels at 1ch. each. Their use as 1 ch. stamps were often sanctioned when there was a shortage. They were either used six to an envelope to make up the Inland rate of 6ch., or in combination with regular postage stamps. The most common combination seen is with the use with a 5 ch. stamp.

Muzaffer .ed-Din
1st May 1896 – 8th Jan 1907.

Muzaffars portrait did not appear on stamps until 1897 almost two years into his reign

Control marks had to be hand stamped on stamps in 1898 because stamps stocks were stolen by bandits and corrupt government officials and the shahs administration was becoming increasingly unpopular.

In 1905 Merchants in Teheran paralised the economic life of the capital by taking 'bast' a form of strike, demanding a court of Justice. Muzaffar agreed but later broke his word which resulted in 12,000 Teheran's taking 'bast' in the British Legation's large garden. Muzaffer eventually agreed and authorised the foundation of a National Assembly.

Muzaffer died in 1907.

By 1908 the Shahs authority had became limited to Teheran itself.
Outside Teheran tribal chiefs & brigands terrorised the countryside.
The chief of the Bakhtiari tribe, who had personal ambitions of the throne, marched on Teheran in 1909 and seized the city after a skirmish with the Persian Army. Shah Muhammad took refuge in the Russian Legation and abdicated.

PERSIA.

Sultan Ahmed Mirza. Shah.
16 July 1909 - 31 Oct 1925 .....

Because of his young age, a Qajar Chief acted as regent at the beginning of Ahmed reign.
A series of stamps featuring the lion of Persia marked the start of the new reign in 1909
In 1911 overprints for officials were released on this issue
April 1911 saw a new series released showing Ahmed Mirza's head and shoulders.
October 1911 4 values overprinted Relais (French for stages) and its Persian equivalent
OFFICIAL stamps were issued in 1912 on the 1912 Series

Russian troops moved into Persia occupying Tabriz in 1911 on the Caspian Sea.
Supporting the deposed Shah Muhammad Ali sought to "Maintain Law & Order".
Widespread looting took place including the cities supply of stamps.
The Authorities in Teheran promptly replenished by overprinting the stamps OFFICIAL in French and Persian orders were made to locate stocks invalid.
The pretenders followers overprinted their stamps also, with a boxed overprint in Arabic meaning Muhammad Ali Shah Qajar. These stamps are scarce.

The young Shah was crowned in 1914 and a set of stamps was released the occasion, in 1915.
Persia declared itself neutral in 1914 when Britain and Russia declared war on Turkey but it was totally ignored by most countries involved in the 1914-18 world war.
Persia became involved in the war, with Russian, Turkish, German and British troops rampaging all over the countryside, Britain & Russia trying to protect their Oil supplies.
The chaotic state of affairs is well illustrated by the confusing array of provisional stamps of this period. Some of these are rare.
Peace was established in Persia in November 1918, but nevertheless British troops had to move against the Bolsheviks in Northern Persia after they had occupied Persia's Caspian Sea seaboard. Thousands died in a resulting famine.
Meanwhile in Teheran the Persian Government was in virtual turmoil and the Shah was no more than a figurehead.
A new figure emerged on the scene, a Col. Reza Khan of the Persian Army which had been defeated by the Jangalis in 1920. The Persian Army fell back to Teheran and encouraged by the British, seized power in 1921.
A set of stamps, the 1915 Coronation issue was released with an overprint (21 Feb 1921, in english and its Persian equivalent.
Reza Khan served as Minister of Defence but Ahmed Mirza was Shah without any powers.
Riza Khan was made Shah as Ahmed Mirza was taking a protracted tour of Europe.
Riza Khan received the title Riza Shah Pahlavi (Iran Persians) in 1925.

RELAISE (FRENCH FOR STAGES)
AND THE PERSIAN EQUIVALENT.

Stamps with this overprint were used for letters dropped in boxes at the horse-posting stages between Resht and Teheran. They were supplied to the heads of the posting-stages at 10% below face, and the overprint was necessary to prevent their resale to merchants in the towns at a discount. The experiment was a failure, and was discontinued after a few years trial.
