Stadium closed after beam falls

All events cancelled while team of experts conducts safety tests

By Bob Mackay

Changes to the design of the stadium will be made to the extent that the safety of the structure is not compromised, says a team of experts who have been called in to investigate the collapse of a 30-tonne steel beam at the Olympic Stadium yesterday.

No one was injured when the 30-tonne beam, which was suspended from the stadium's roof, fell to the ground. The beam was suspended from the stadium's roof by a steel cable. It could happen again: engineer

By William Maxwell

An engineering expert in precast concrete says there is a possibility that another beam at Olympic Stadium may fall.

William Maxwell, an internationally respected expert in precast and prestressed concrete, says there is a possibility that another beam at Olympic Stadium may fall. He says the beam that fell yesterday was not the only one that was at risk.

Tories to legislate public servants back to work

By Terence Mills

Ottawa — The federal government is expected to legislate public servants back to work when Parliament resumes Monday.

The legislation will also, in effect, put a ban on strikes by federal employees for three years, Landon said.

Lindros takes a few shots in new autobiography

By Dennis DeYoung

It's the life story of an Olympian. For one Joe, Eric Lindros' autobiography, takes a few shots in his own words.

Lindros' autobiography, which is a collection of his thoughts and feelings, is a must-read for hockey fans.

Eric Lindros plays at Pelee Island.
