RE-ENTRY

A re-entry is a duplication of part of the stamp design, caused by a mistake when the printing plate was being made by the usual process for line-engraved stamps. A master die is engraved by hand and then impressed several times on a sheet of softened metal. If the impression is made in the wrong position the entry must be corrected and a new one made in the correct place. The "re-entry" is said to occur when the wrong impression is not completely deleted, and therefore shows on the printed stamp.
