NATIONAL ANTHEM OF RHODESIA

Rise, O voices of Rhodesia, God may we thy bounty share,
Give us strength to face all danger and, where challenge is, to dare.
Guide us Lord, to wise decision, ever of thy grace aware.
Oh, let our hearts beat bravely always, for this land within thy care.

Rise, O voices of Rhodesia, bringing her your proud acclaim,
Grandly echoing through the mountains, rolling over far flung plain.
Roaring in the mighty rivers, joining in one grand refrain,
Ascending to the sunlit heavens, telling of her honoured name.

THE BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA COMPANY

(Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1889)

Founded by Cecil Rhodes under the Royal Charter granted by Queen Victoria, the British South Africa Company was responsible for the administration and development of the Rhodesias from 1890 to 1923. The Rhodesian postal services were run by the Chartered Company, as it became known, from 1890, when Mashonaland was occupied, until 1924. The first Postmaster General was Andrew Duncan.

Currency Cards, or "Marshall Hole" cards, were issued after the outbreak of the Boer War, to overcome the shortage of silver coins. This shortage was eased following the relief of Mafeking, and most cards were redeemed in August 1900. Approximately 20,000 pounds worth were issued and all but 1,000 pounds worth were redeemed.

FORERUNNER. Southern Rhodesia was granted self-Government on 1 October 1923. The first definitives went on sale on 1 April 1924. During the interim period, BSAC stamps remained in use and those so postmarked are known as "Forerunners."

In 1923, the territory administered by the British South Africa Company was divided and the portion south of the Zambezi River became the British Crown Colony of Southern Rhodesia. A referendum the year before on a proposal of incorporation with the Union of South Africa was rejected.

Britain's Conservative government, ignoring African protests, imposed federation on Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, and Nyasaland in 1953. Rather than serving to entrench the power of white settlers, the Central African Federation boosted the growth of African nationalism as a new generation of literate Africans sought to emulate Ghana's achievement of independence in 1957. The Federation was dissolved in 1963.

HARRISON AND SONS LTD LONDON

On 8 December 1965 a 2/6d stamp was issued commemorating Rhodesia's Unilateral Declaration of Independence from Britain, which had been announced on 11 November 1965. This was the first stamp to be printed locally (Mardon Printers, Ltd., Salisbury) and was considered invalid for postage by Britain, Malawi, Zambia, and Barbados.

Independence "forgery" Type I, red dots on sable antelope

Independence "forgery" Type II, solid red on sable antelope

On 17 January 1966 the Ministry of Posts released the remainder of its "Southern Rhodesia" definitive stocks with the overprint "Independence 11th November 1965" in black. The overprint was applied locally. The stamps were considered invalid for postage by Britian, Malawi, Zambia, and Barbados, and were surcharged.

Only 39,300 stamps of the Southern Rhodesia 5/- denomination were available for overprinting. To meet the demand from collectors for complete sets, the Ministry of Posts decided to re-issue the Winston Churchill 1/3d commemorative of 16 August 1965 surcharged 5/- with the "Independence" overprint in red. Only 20,000 stamps were issued.

On 9 February 1966, the Ministry of Posts issued a "Rhodesia" definitive series of 14 denominations, replacing the "Southern Rhodesia" definitive series. The 1/2d value was discontinued as it served no useful purpose. The 2/6d design was retouched and the 1/- "Emeralds" design was redrawn. A new value of 1/6d was added for the air mail rate. The stamps were due to be shipped by the printers from London at the end of November 1965, but their shipment was blocked by the British government. In late December 1965, the ministry of Posts sent a telegram saying that if the stamps were not released and a third of them sent on the next flight, the order would be cancelled. The loss to a British firm of an order worth 25,000 pounds encouraged the British government to release the stamps and they were received in Salisbury in January 1966.

Coil with join. 960,000 coil stamps in rolls of 480 were printed. The rolls consist of strips of stamps joined together. In Rhodesia, the stamps were sold from vending machines.

Originally issued in London in June 1966, collectors ordered the 1/- booklets direct from London stamp dealers. The Postmaster-General of Rhodesia did not receive his supply until February 1967.

The Ministry of Posts commissioned the Salisbury firm of Mardon Printers to make reprints of the Rhodesia definitive stamps in the summer of 1966 as supplies from Britain were no longer obtainable due to sanctions. Printed by offset lithography, they differed from the multicolor photogravure London issues. In the Mardon printings, the color intensity is greater and the Queen's portrait is larger and has a thicker frame. The first local reprints were made on JH4, a white British-manufactured paper with white gum, supplies of which British firms were able to send to Salisbury by air until sanctions became more strict.

Two trial printings of the 1/3d definitive were made on paper manufactured in West Germany. The first trial was made on supreme chromo paper with a creamy-colored gum (left). Printing: 12,000. The second trial was made on a paper with a brown-colored gum. Printing: 6,240
Issued: 1 November 1966

The Ministry of Posts decided that the German-manufactured supreme chromo paper, with cream-colored gum, was to be used on all future printings of Rhodesian postage stamps done by Mardon Printers, Ltd.

The RHOPEX sheets were originally printed in large panes of twelve miniature sheets. These panes were then cut up and issued as single miniature sheets. It is believed that the only original uncut sheet was in the possession of the Rhodesia Post Office. All type A sheets and most type B sheets have holes in the top margins caused by a clamping device used in the cutting process.

Type A sheet 2/6d stamp shows "2 JAN 4892" flaw which is unique to Type A sheets.

The Decimal Currency Act of 1967 set up a Decimal Currency Board with responsibility to organize the changeover from sterling to decimal currency. By printing "dual currency" stamps, the government felt the population would get used to the new currency in advance of the change-over date. The Rhodesian coins placed in circulation in 1964 already bore an imprint in dual denominations.
